A parent's guide to raising financially responsible children in an age of unprecedented wealth It is natural as parents that we want to give our children the best of everything. And in an age of unprecedented wealth and easy credit, upper- and middle-income parents can indulge that urge like never before. Yet, you have become alarmed over the impact this newfound affluence may be having on your children. You fear that through your generosity you are training your children to be greedy, selfish spendthrifts. The first parenting guide to focus exclusively on this increasingly sensitive topic, Silver Spoon Kids was coauthored by a psychotherapist who counsels people with money-related emotional problems and a lawyer specializing in estate planning. Drawing upon their experiences as members of the renowned NYU Family Wealth Institute, they tell you how to talk to kids about money, how to teach them to handle it responsibly, and how to instill in your kids a sense of giving to their communities.

Have you ever felt your kids were spoiled or ungrateful? Are your children overly focused on material possessions? Do your kids really understand the value of money and how hard it is to earn it? Are you concerned about your children's initiative and level of achievement? Do you worry that your kids won't be able to make it on their own? If you answered yes to any of these questions, then you are not alone. Many parents, just like you, well know how to succeed financially, but are still left with nagging concerns about how their prosperity will affect their children. This book offers a vital new program based on the Five Immutable Laws of Financial Parenting, practical principles to guide your every decision when handling your kids and money. Filled with valuable self-assessment tools and corrective prescriptions, the book serves as a timely, compassionate guide that will help you raise happy, well-adjusted and financially secure children, no matter what their age or stage in life.
